

CONTENTS

Foreword by Patricia Lewis .....	ix
About the authors .....	xiii

Chapter 1

What do we mean by “thinking outside the box” in multilateral disarmament and arms control negotiations?

John Borrie

Summary .....	1
Introduction .....	1
An inconvenient truth .....	2
Complexity .....	7
Approaching disarmament from the bottom up .....	9
Beyond the box .....	10

Chapter 2

Diplomats, civil society and academia: some thoughts on the limits of the discourse

Vanessa Martin Randin

Summary .....	13
Introduction .....	13
International relations and the study of cooperation .....	15
Game theory perspectives and multilateral arms control and disarmament negotiations .....	18
Two-level games: an alternative framework for understanding cooperation? .....	20
Civil society activism in arms control and disarmament processes .....	23
Conclusions .....	25

---

Chapter 3
NGOs and multilateral disarmament diplomacy: limits and possibilities
David Atwood
Summary . . . . .	33
Introduction . . . . .	33
The state system and the limits of inclusion . . . . .	34
What does “access” mean and what difference does it make? . . . . .	37
Promising avenues for NGO engagement in multilateral diplomacy settings . . . . .	39
Towards a new “community of practice” for NGOs . . . . .	49
Chapter 4
Changing perceptions and practice in multilateral arms control negotiations
Rebecca Johnson
Summary . . . . .	55
Introduction . . . . .	55
Three approaches to multilateralism . . . . .	56
Framing objectives and outcomes . . . . .	62
Negotiating tactics . . . . .	72
Conclusions . . . . .	79
Chapter 5
Cooperation and defection in the Conference on Disarmament
John Borrie
Summary . . . . .	89
Introduction . . . . .	89
Deadlock and its discontents . . . . .	90
It’s all or nothing . . . . .	94
Recognizing inefficient equilibria . . . . .	102
Conclusions . . . . .	104
Chapter 6
Engineering progress: a diplomat’s perspective on multilateral disarmament
Daniël Prins
Summary . . . . .	109

---

Introduction	109
Transformative potential	112
Flexibility in regional groups	113
Flexibility in procedures	116
Flexibility in relations with headquarters	118
Flexibility in involving non-state partners	120
Ever-increasing complexity	124
Conclusions	124
Chapter 7
A physics of diplomacy? The dynamics of complex social phenomena and their implications for multilateral negotiations
Aurélia Merçay and John Borrie
Summary	129
Introduction	129
The rational approach	132
Pertinence of a physics of society	136
Some key concepts	138
Implications for multilateral negotiations	148
Conclusion	157
Chapter 8
Non-linear modelling of small arms proliferation
Aurélia Merçay
Summary	165
Introduction	165
The dynamics of small arms proliferation	166
A non-linear model of small arms proliferation	169
Evaluation of the model	179
Results and implications	181
Why this model is useful	185
Next steps?	186
Chapter 9
Security of journalists: making the case for modelling armed violence as a means to promote human security
Nathan Taback and Robin Coupland
Summary	191

---

Introduction	191
Human security and the effects of armed violence	192
Why study attacks on journalists in conflict areas?	194
Discussion	200
Conclusions	203
Chapter 10
Investment policies and arms production— experiences from the Norwegian Pension Fund–Global
Gro Nystuen
Summary	207
Background	207
The ethical guidelines	208
Humanitarian principles and negative screening of certain weapons producers	212
Possible consequences of exclusion of weapons producers	219
Concluding remarks	221
Chapter 11
The role of non-governmental organizations in the monitoring and verification of international arms control and disarmament agreements
Michael Crowley and Andreas Persbo
Summary	225
Introduction	225
Defining verification and monitoring	227
Differing approaches to NGO monitoring and verification	231
Enhancing the quality and scope of future NGO monitoring and verification of arms control and disarmament agreements	239
Final thoughts	245
Acronyms	253